It is doubtful whether we have ever had a law that created more discussion, more bitterness among our people, and that has caused the shedding of more blood. Everybody admits that it contains some good features, but the trouble is that it has been enforced in a way that it has become oppressive. The searching of the public streets of Charleston are not the law. No one can object to the suppression of the illegal sale of liquor so long as the sale is probibited except in the manner as now prescribed by law, but this can be done in a decent and orderly way. We believe that if the metropolitan police system the enforcement of the law left to the sheriffs, magistrates and the regular people, and the dispensary law will
